NOTE FROM BURNBRAE

At Burnbrae Poll we take a balanced approach in our classing of animals. We undertake a strict visual appraisal along with benchmarked objective measurement, in the form of Australian Sheep Breeding Values (ASBVs). At classing each animal is visually assessed on body structure, fibre quality, quantity and skin type.

ASBVs have been a fantastic tool for evaluating a number of other traits that are difficult to pick up just by eye. We take a lot of care ensuring the data we collect is best practice thus generating highly reliable breeding values for the most informed breeding decisions for us and our clients. This allows our clients to enjoy the multi income streams provided by a quality 18.5 micron merino wool clip, fast growing high yielding lambs and surplus ewe sales.

Over the last year we've gone about changing our management to ensure our genetics are fully expressed. The two main changes have been to cease mulesing and the other has been joining ewe lambs.
We have been breeding for plain bodied easy-care sheep with low worms and low dags and culling for fly strike and fleece faults for decades so mulesing has become unnecessary and will allow us to put even more selection pressure on our genetics.

Our second key change driver has been to join our ewe lambs at 6.5 to 7.5 mths to increase our genetic gain as well as placing additional selection pressure on the maturity curve of our ewe lambs which are correlated towards early growth and reproduction. These ewes have been joined to some of our leading sires to try and expedite our genetic improvement.

The feedback we've received from our clients in their first cross are seeing a visible impact of increased early growth and carcass traits on an easy care, worm resistant sheep without giving up wool production or fertility. The difficult dry conditions experienced in parts of Australia highlight the importance of these traits on lamb survival, saleability, labour input and profit.
