Welcome note...

“Don't waste a good crisis” are the words that have really struck a chord with me this year.

Charles Darwin spoke about survival of a species being a function of its ability to adapt to conditions, which seems appropriate now as we adjust to the evolving markets for wool, meat and surplus sheep in the current COVID conditions. I certainly don't advocate chasing rainbows in business, and I am more pleased now than ever before to be offering genetics to our clients and the industry that are trait leaders across all important areas without being too heavily reliant on any one trait, typically wool, to keep a business strong.

The recovery we've seen here in our sheep, after three of the driest years on record, is a big part of why we do what we do. The mixed age commercial ewes are a great example of genuine hardiness. Having been left, un-fed, on mostly bare native hills, they scanned in lamb with 173% foetuses.

Now, under much better conditions, they look to be on track to mark over 140% lambs – the ideal road to recovery post drought. Add to this the lambs born out of our ewe lambs and the recovery accelerates again.

It's a fascinating animal we're breeding and the new visual scoring system that's been added this year is our attempt to give you the best opportunity to select the genetics you need, even if you're unable to attend the sale.

Thank you for your support. Our plans revolve around offering cutting edge genetics to the industry for many years to come, and your support is what makes that possible.

Best of luck with your breeding.

Kind regards,
Chad & Louise Taylor.
